THE NEXT BORED APE YACHT CLUB?

With hundreds of new NFT collections popping up every week, it is hard to predict which project will moon and which will crash. NFTs are purely speculative investments, up to the investors' subjective view on their worth. However, we can look at past performance as an indicator of future success.

The Sneaky Vampire Syndicate is a NFT club created by one of the artists behind the Bored Ape Yacht Club (BAYC) NFT collection. In similar fashion to the BAYC, the Sneaky Vampire Syndicate will consist of generative cartoon portraits of vampires that are ERC-721 compliant tokens. There will be 8,888 NFTs available to the public to mint over the next few weeks at a price of 0.08 ETH. Out of the 8,888 NFT generative portraits, 8 of them will be hand-drawn by the artist Migwashere.

The Syndicate will choose 400 participants from Discord or Twitter to mint up to two NFTs before the launch. One week after the launch, The SVS team has planned a "special giveaway" to all vampire owners. Later on, they will airdrop all Vampire NFT Holders, free NFT bats to accompany their vampires. In the future, the Syndicate plans to create a Vampire Lair community hub in the metaverse video game, The Sandbox, as well as a 2-D fighting game. The 2-D fighting game will incorporate the Sneaky Vampire Syndicate NFTs once they are released. The game is in development by the indie game studio, Static City Games. Only owners of the NFTs will be permitted to play. The community has been growing exponentially with 16.7k Twitter followers and 31k Discord members amassed in just a week, so make sure to look out for the upcoming release.

SOTHEBY'S BORED APE NFT AUCTION

Currently, Sotheby's Auction house is auctioning 107 Bored Ape Yacht Club (BAYC) and 101 Bored Ape Kennel Club (BAKC) NFTs -- both developed by Yuga Labs. The bidding on the Bored Ape Yacht Club NFTs is set to close on September 9th, at 10:01 AM EDT. Sotheby's estimated the price of the BAYC NFTs to be somewhere in between $12M and $18M; however, the highest bid is already at $19M. For the Bored Ape Kennel Club NFT collection, the bidding is set to close on September 9th, at 10:02 AM EDT. Sotheby's has estimated the price to be somewhere in between $1.5M and $2M; however, the highest bid is only at $550K.

These NFTs have gone a long way since they were released. The BAYC NFTs were put on sale this past April at 0.08 ETH each. Currently, the floor price for a single BAYC is 39.18 ETH or ~$135K. The BAKC was released in June, given only to BAYC holders. Within a few days of the BAKC release, they were already listed on OpenSea for 1 ETH each. Currently, the floor price for a single BAKC is 2.99 ETH or ~$10.3K. The insane growth of price has come partly due to many celebrities purchasing their own Bored Apes. For example, NBA legend Stephen Curry bought a BAYC for 55 ETH on August 28th, 2021. The NFT collection craze continues to amaze everyone and will for the upcoming months.

PRANKSY PRANKED INTO BUYING A FAKE BANKSY

Last week, a prominent NFT collector known as Pranksy was tricked into buying a fake Banksy NFT. The NFT was advertised on the homepage of the official Banksy website; so it is suspected that the website was hacked in order to post an OpenSea link to the fake NFT. The NFT is a pixelated image of a CryptoPunks-esque character smoking in sunglasses and a hat. The artwork was listed as “Great Redistribution of the Climate Change Disaster” by a user called gaakmann -- a reference to a pseudonym previously used by Banksy.

Believing the NFT was Banksy’s first ever NFT, Pranksy knew he had to own it. But, the auction ended early after Pranksy offered more than 90% than other bidders. He was suspicious of a hack or scam after his offer of $336,000 was instantly accepted with days still left in the auction. In an unexpected turn of events, the hacker returned Pranksy all of the money besides a transaction fee of ~$6,000.
